

Equal Opportunity Schools Welcomes New Vice President of Partnership Development, Jason Roppolo

Equal Opportunity Schools (EOS) is proud to announce the selection of Jason Roppolo as our new Vice President of Partnership Development. Jason is an accomplished sales and education professional with over twenty years of experience. He has worked for various education solutions companies and organizations throughout his career, providing solutions to superintendents and district leaders of K-12 schools. For 13 years, he served as a youth action officer and special education administrator in the Dallas Independent School District.

"Jason's experience, leadership, and knowledge about low-income and students of color are invaluable to EOS," CEO Eddie Lincoln says. "His vision of how to build this organization is aligned with mine and the entire organization. I'm incredibly excited for him to be a part of our Senior Leadership Team as we continue to develop and expand EOS."

Jason will oversee the organization's partnerships and expansion into other school districts, helping more low-income and students of color access and excel in advanced courses. In addition, he will collaborate with our new Senior Director of Communications, Larry Swayne, to develop a national strategy that will increase the organization's presence and impact.
